TO ADVERTISERS.

THE GAZETTE has a first-class artist connected with its establishment—one who can design, engrave and make any cut an advertiser may desire, at as low a rate as can be done north or west.

There is no reason why you should not illustrate your advertisements as is being done in all large cities. For particulars apply at THE GAZETTE business office.

THE CITY.

BUSINESS OFFICE HOURS.
The business office of THE GAZETTE will be open until 9 p. m. every week day, and on Sundays it will be open from 7 to 9 p. m. Advertisers will please bring in the copy during business hours.

The foreman of the composing room will accept after these hours only such advertisements as are accompanied by the cash at regular rates, as he has no authority to make, and knows nothing about existing contracts.

Indications.
WASHINGTON, Oct. 31, 1 A. M.—For Eastern Texas: Fair, except light local rain near the coast, warmer, southerly breeze.

For Arkansas: Local rains, warmer Wednesday, colder Thursday; southerly veering to northwesterly winds.

Everything is rolling on smoothly toward the big Democratic barbecue and picnic at the pavilion next Saturday. People of all political shades are cordially invited to be present and enjoy a general good time. Governor Ruse, Attorney General Hogg and other orators of state and national reputation will talk pure Democracy.

YOUTHFUL ROBBERS.

Officers Arrest Two Boys for Burglary.
Sometime ago W. H. Taylor missed some knives from his store and last Sunday night knives, pocket books, cuff buttons, etc., were stolen. Last night Officers Wiltcher and Scott arrested John Lovley and Cal. Gbler, two white boys twelve years old. They recovered one book and four knives from a boy named Alstrop, to whom they had been given, and later Officer Hippo got a pocket-book. The whereabouts of several other pocket-knives is known. The officers did good work in this case. The two boys are in jail.

More Evidence on the Subject of the Secret Order of Videttes.
Evening Mail, Oct. 30.

The Mail man started out again this morning in search of the gentlemen who have been charged by THE GAZETTE with being members of the secret order of "Videttes," with the following result:

Captain Sam Evans was found at his office on the public square and did not hesitate to denounce the publication in THE GAZETTE as false so far as it pertains to himself. He said that he never was a member of such an order as the Videttes was represented to be, and the charge that he was an outrage and a slander, that should be answered for. He said that THE GAZETTE must furnish its authority for the charges made or abide the result.

"Will you institute suit against THE GAZETTE?"

"Will, and I will encourage suits for damages against it. There will be at least 100 damage suits filed against the paper from all over the state on account of this publication, and I will spend $100,000 or down them."

Mr. M. D. Priest, candidate for District Judge on the Non-Partisan ticket, was seen by a Mail reporter and he denied positively that he was or had been a member of the Videttes, though he said he had heard of the order two years ago.

J. C. Martin, who THE GAZETTE charged with being a Vidette, in answer to a question propounded by the reporter said:

"Yes, I was a member of the Videttes."

"How did you happen to get out?"

"I was fired out because I was a Republican."

Mr. Martin intimated that he could tell a great deal about the order and those who belonged to it, but said he would not do so just now. He mentioned a number of others who were members, and their names were among those published by THE GAZETTE.

If there was a lodge of the Videttes in Fort Worth, as Mr. Fanning and Mr. Emmerson say there was, it must have had several members besides themselves, and as only men of "superior intelligence" could get in, these members must have been the big-bugs of the "People's party" in this county. If the books hadn't been burned, the roster of membership might be published.

When the threaten-d libel suits against THE GAZETTE come to trial, there will be some funny managers before the court. The plaintiffs will have to prove that they do not belong to the Videttes, and that connection with that order is so disreputable a thing as to expose them to public contempt and ridicule, or cause them to incur some special damage. The only witnesses they can produce to prove that they are not members are the members themselves, and how are they to ascertain who these are? And if they can find two or three of them, how can they tell if when they have already taken an oath not to reveal the membership of the lodge? And these members will have to swear that they are members, to be competent witnesses, when they have already sworn not to reveal their membership. Watch oath is to be believed, the former or the latter? Or, there will be fun when these libel suits come up for trial—if ever they do.

TWO MEETINGS.

The Non-Partisans and Independents Discuss the Election Week Question.
A number of Non-Partisans, Independents and Union Laborites from the city and county met at the courthouse and Talbot and Wauke's hall last night to select the representatives they wanted at the different polling places in the county to see the vote counted. The election law as a whole was explained and the work of selecting the witnesses provided for. The meetings were well attended and harmonious. The sessions were short. It was decided that the Independents would insist on representation.

THE MOOR OF VENICE.

Other presented last night with Keene as the Grady Lago.

A mind less powerful than Shakespeare's could not have conceived and set in close contrast two such different natures as those of Othello and Iago. Othello, broad, deep, strong, honest, open, fair; easily stirred to love or jealousy, in the first gentle and true and sincere, in the other, fierce, determined and revengeful. Iago, cunning, crafty, cold, sinister, loving nothing but self, suspicious of others because he knew himself dishonest, hating every man who was good, because he was himself so bad. To see the great Iago play upon Othello's unsuspecting honesty is a sight that never fails, and which seems to make the play one of the most popular of those left by the master bard. Another element of popularity is found in the number of good characters embodied in the play, which takes the burden of the piece from one pair of shoulders and lays it upon many. In other words, it is not a "one part" play. Had it been, and had that part been played by Mr. Keene, the performance of last night had lost much of its interest, for in the division of honors it must be confessed that the lion's share could not in justice be given Mr. Keene.

The Iago of Mr. Keene, while a more pleasing piece of work than his Richard III, in that it furnishes him less opportunity to strew the stage with tattered passion, is yet far from satisfactory. There is a self-consciousness—a Tom Keene-ness—pervading the whole representation that mars its artistic finish and keeps it from giving perfect satisfaction. Mr. Keene has a trick of looking at the audience after delivering what he considers a very fetching point, with an air which says: "Will you mind that now?" In addition, there was the same ragged and uneven reading which marred his Richard. The play was not perfect in his lines, and tripped and stumbled in many places in a way that made the house feel as if he should fall.

The Othello of Mr. George Leacock is a piece of work. In the first place he looked the Moor—though his makeup was hardly dark enough to justify the lines which describe Othello. Mr. Leacock read his lines with great force, in the scene before the Duke he was grave, dignified, impressive, and delivered his speech with fine effect. His scenes with Iago, wherein the crafty demon showed in his mind the seeds of jealousy, were well sustained, his transition from perfect love and trust through doubt and fear to despairing jealousy were well done, as was the one in which he charges Desdemona with infidelity and treachery.
